1.  Apollo's Fire: Igniting America's Clean-energy Economy
by Insee, Jay.; Hendricks, Bracken.
Publication: Washington, DC Island Press, 2008.
A New Apollo Project for Energy Where there is no vision, the people perish. —Proverbs 29:1 No one ever climbed a mountain they believed could not be climbed. No one ever started a business they believed would fail. And no nation ever undertook a major initiative it believed was destined for dust. When Kennedy said America was going to the moon, he did not believe we would fall short. So too, America will not commit itself to tackle the challenge of global warming or break free from the clutches of Middle Eastern oil until we have confidence that we can build a clean-energy future that will be brighter than the world we are living in today. Why has America not risen to the challenges of climate change and oil dependence to date? The problem
